8 FACTS COMMON TO ALL COUNTS

9 6. United States Patent No. 7,008,227 (“the ’227 Patent”), titled “Self – 10 Drilling Implant,” was duly and legally issued by the United States Patent and 11 Trademark Office on March 7, 2006. A true and correct copy of the ’277 Patent is 12 attached hereto as Exhibit 1. Plaintiff is the assignee and owner of the ’227 patent 13 and all rights arising therefrom.

14 7. The ’227 Patent is directed towards, inter alia, a dental implant 15 which is self-drilling and self-tapping.

16 8. More particularly, the ’227 patent claims a dental implant having 17 body and head portions. The body portion has a tip portion and external threads 18 including a lead thread portion, an intermediate thread portion, and a distal thread 19 portion. The threads of the lead, intermediate and distal thread portions comprise 20 a cutting edge so that the implant is self-tapping. The head portion of the implant
21 has a central bore with an internal thread for receiving a dental prosthesis. The tip 22 portion of the implant has at least one cutting edge for cutting bone to form a bore 23 as the implant is rotated into position in the patient’s mouth. The cutting edge is 24 formed at the generally longitudinal axis of the implant and extends radially 25 outward such that upon rotation of the implant, the implant is self-drilling. The 26 implant also includes at least one flute having a first end adjacent to the cutting 27
28

10 11. The NobelActive implant has body and head portions. The body 11 portion has a tip portion and external threads including a lead thread portion, an 12 intermediate thread portion, and a distal thread portion. The threads of the lead, 13 intermediate and distal thread portions comprise a cutting edge so that the implant 14 is self-tapping. The head portion of the implant has a central bore with an internal 15 thread for receiving a dental prosthesis. The tip portion of the implant has at least 16 one cutting edge for cutting bone to form a bore as the implant is rotated into 17 position in the patient's mouth. The cutting edge is formed at the generally 18 longitudinal axis of the implant and extends radially outward such that upon 19 rotation of the implant, the implant is self-drilling. The implant also includes at 20 least one flute having a first end adjacent to the cutting edge so that upon rotation
